Jonathans Hotel and Restaurant

Jonathans Hotel and Restaurant in the Midlands has enjoyed more than 30 years of successful business and has become well known for its quirky, Victorian décor. However, the interior was in need of updating. The main concern was to ensure that the history and character of Jonathans was kept, whilst creating a contemporary interior that would impress new and old clients alike. To achieve this Jonathans commissioned the Floors-2-Go Contract Division.

The hotel's design team, with the expert advice of the Floors-2-Go Contract Division, chose Stonehouse Technoclass marble tiles for the main restaurant and street bar, whilst the main reception was fitted with Stonehouse Thassos marble and granite tiles. In the main lounge area, where the design team wanted to create an atmosphere of opulence and exclusivity, Magnum Panga Panga wood, sourced exclusively from overseas, proved to be the ideal flooring to complement the lavish furnishings.

Andy Acton, director of the Floors-2-Go Contracts Division, comments: "This was a fantastic project to be involved in. We had a very tight timescale for the project and in order for it to run smoothly we needed the flooring to be specified, sourced and fitted within three weeks, ready for Jonathans grand re-opening. We managed to source and fit a great range of exclusive products, some of which had to be sourced from overseas, within the deadline and worked closely with the design team throughout the project to ensure that everything met their design criteria."
